BOTH PARTIES HURL CHARGES

Propaganda Accusals Made by Democrats and Republicans

By The Associated Press
WASHINGTON, July 14.—The Democrats and Republicans today hurled charges of propaganda against each other in the campaign for the presidency.

Charles Hays, Paul Hays, and Paul Hays, Jr. were among the Democrats who accused the Republicans of propaganda. Hays, Jr. said that the Republicans were trying to "sell" the public on a "false picture" of the country.

Another level of the campaign was a "propaganda" contest between the two parties. The Democrats accused the Republicans of "selling" the public on a "false picture" of the country.

WARSHIP WORK
LAGS IN U. S.McGuffey's School Text Books First
To Strike Note of Real Americanism

Sound of four articles on 180th anniversary of William Holmes McGuffey's first Reader to be celebrated this month at his old home town of Oxford.

Special to The Star
OXFORD, O., July 11.—The fourth decade of the century has been marked in a remarkable way by the publication of a new McGuffey's School Text Book. The new book is a complete revision of the old McGuffey's School Text Book, which has been the standard text book for the past 40 years. The new book is a complete revision of the old McGuffey's School Text Book, which has been the standard text book for the past 40 years.

The primer was patterned after the first McGuffey's primer, which was published in 1825. The primer was the first of a series of books which were published by McGuffey. As has been noted in a previous article, McGuffey taught in the public schools during his undergraduate day, and it is thought that the experience of a student who has been a student of McGuffey's primer is a unique one. The primer was the first of a series of books which were published by McGuffey.

In all probability, he had a copy of his all-time favorite primer, the McGuffey's primer, which was published in 1825. The primer was the first of a series of books which were published by McGuffey.

Finally, about 1900 McGuffey began the writing of his first reader. He had studied the American primer psychology, and he knew educational methods. He was convinced that America needed something of its own, and that patterns of the old British schoolbooks were out of place in the new civilization.

After the first reader, published in 1836, followed a primer, and then for a number of years a series of readers. The first reader, published in 1836, followed a primer, and then for a number of years a series of readers.
